and further Details

As an elected official, understanding climate change and planning for climate action is part of the new business-as-usual for local governments. This workshop will equip you with knowledge needed to make policy and decisions that will help your community move from coping to thriving in a changing climate.

This 4-hour workshop will address:

- * Context of climate change: How is the climate changing in the Basin/Boundary region? What is the global context?
- * Relevance of climate action: What does climate change mean for municipal operations, economies, community health and the environment?
- * Climate action opportunities: What can your community do to reduce emissions and address vulnerabilities to fire, flood, drought and other risks? Where can you access support?

From Idea to Implementation: Working Together Towards
A Clean Growth Future for Kootenay and Boundary Communities

Participants will learn practical skills for implementing climate action initiatives in their communities, from the conception stage, through to planning, collaboration and implementation. The workshop will focus on skill building for locally elected officials, including making a pitch, working with regional partners, securing funding, and building organizational capacity.

Presenters will include CEA, local government staff and regional partners such as a tourism or economic development organization that can speak to the co-benefits of climate action and the power of partnerships.
